ARCHITECTURE / SOLID-CANOPY STUDY

The house in its landscape.

A strong horizontal roofline, a layered façade and a generous garden edge.

ARRIVAL & STREET ELEVATION

A composed arrival.

Vertical timber-toned cladding gives the lower level a consistent rhythm. Pale upper walls and dark-framed openings create a measured contrast.

STREET-FACING VIEWS / SOLID-CANOPY STUDY

GARDEN ELEVATION / SOLID-CANOPY STUDY

Open to the garden.

A broad deck and generous glazing connect the principal rooms to the landscape.

THE INDOOR–OUTDOOR EDGE

Across the threshold.

Broad glazed openings bring the living spaces into visual contact with the terrace. Pale surfaces, a stone-textured accent and a warm-toned deck give the transition a tactile character.

INTERIOR PERSPECTIVE

Living, connected.

Kitchen, lounge and stair read together as a sequence of connected spaces.

LEISURE & ENTERTAINING

Room to unwind.

A PLACE TO GATHER

A dedicated leisure space brings a games area and bar together beside the deck. Large glazed openings maintain a direct relationship with the garden.

A setting for shared moments.

THE TERRACE SEQUENCE

Along the terrace.

The elongated deck ties the garden-facing rooms together, creating a continuous outdoor edge to the house.

INTERIOR / TERRACE / GARDEN

MATERIAL CHARACTER

Contrast, rhythm & texture.

Pale planes

A light, calm upper volume.

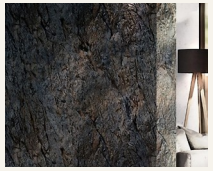

Timber-toned rhythm

Vertical lines ground the façade.

Dark glazing profiles

A precise frame for views.

Stone-textured accent

A tactile note at the living edge.

Visual palette shown in the renderings; not a material specification.

ROOF & TERRACE STUDIES

Two expressions of the roofl ine.

Alternative treatments shown in the supplied architectural visualisations.

A / Solid canopy

A continuous roof extends over the upper terrace.

B / Timber pergola

Open timber elements define a lighter terrace edge.

TRIA studio

ROOFLINE / TIMBER-PERGOLA STUDY

A lighter frame above.

Open timber elements bring rhythm and a different silhouette to the upper terrace.

GARDEN FAÇADE / TIMBER-PERGOLA STUDY

Architecture for everyday living.

From its upper terrace to its generous garden edge, the residence is composed around a clear sequence of indoor and outdoor spaces.
